BELLEVUE -- Jerrod W. Bandy, the driver of a car involved in a downtown Bellevue crash that killed a man March 25, pleaded not guilty Wednesday to one count of vehicular homicide and two counts of vehicular assault.

Bandy, 21, of Sequim, remained at the King County jail in lieu of $350,000 bail. A pretrial hearing was set for April 19.

Police say Bandy was traveling 50 mph through an intersection at Northeast Second Street and 108th Avenue Northeast, trying to beat a red light, when his Jeep Cherokee struck a BMW driven by Ryan Kellogg. Four passengers were in Kellogg's car.

A blood test on Bandy conducted after the crash showed his level of alcohol was twice the legal limit of 0.08, according to charging papers. Police say Bandy admitted drinking beer and vodka before the crash.

One of the passengers in Kellogg's car, Robert Vasen, 20, of Bellevue, later died from his injuries. Kellogg and the other three passengers in his car were injured. Bandy and five passengers in his SUV escaped injury.
